

Please tell us your story of how love has healed in your life

When I think of how love is the healer, I remind myself love is everyone's birthright.

I'm someone passionate about getting to the essence from which what is going on originates. That is when as a healer I realized what came through me in healing was what I know of as love energy. When I am conscious of my heart and allow it expression many amazing things shift, change expression, and have returned bodies to their healthy state.

For me, that is amazing and because I know love is the power. I know the power is not exclusive to me and others like me, but is available and inevitable in everyone's lives.

I know the power of love has healed reader's lives. I want to know your stories and share them on this web site.

Please comment to this blog with your stories.